

FOPLAP HILL CEMETERY

This cemetery lies about one half mile north of North Montpelier in the town of Calais. It is a few yards off the road so not visible from route #14. About seventy-five percent of the people buried here were residents of East Montpelier; which is the reason we have included them in this edition of the Cemeteries of East Montpelier. It is a private organization. Much of the work of reading the stones was done by Pauline Coburn.

And his eye is pale and blurred:
Death, with frosty nad and cold
plunks the old man by the hand.

The Society of Friends or the Quaker Cemetery

This cemetery is on the west side of Town road #46 near the junction of Town road 25. The Friends Meeting House was nearby but fell into ruin toward the end of the last century and was torn down. Many more Quakers than show here were buried but they did not mark their early graves and other markers are missing as well. The local Society has fenced in the graveyard but it is in poorer condition than in 1973.

TINKHAM CEMETERY

Tinkham Cemetery is a few yards west of the Quaker Cemetery, under old maple trees. The first settlers of the town, Solomon Dodge and John Templeton are buried here as well as their father-in-law, James Taggart. In 1973 several stones were repaired, the brush cut and grass mowed. On a tour of cemeteries in 1993 the history group found the grass mowed and the cemetery in good condition.
